"SQUEALING" OF ONE LEADS TO CAPTURE OF COUNTERFEITERS

Nation Wide Operations Believed Brought to End By Arrest

VALLEY PEOPLE ARE VICTIMS

Believed That Accomplices Worked Through Upper Monongahela Region—Spurious Coin Found at Bentleyville

Through the "squealing" of one of their number and the shrewd efforts of Capt. P. J. Ahern, head of the United States secret service operatives in Pittsburg a band of counterfeiters whose operations were nation-wide and among the most successful ever brought to the attention of the government, have at last been captured and are in the jails of five states.

They are George Ryan the alleged head of the gang, who is in jail in Detroit, Mich.; Charles McDermott and George Tate, alias Tilden in jail at Pittsburg; Matthew Hennessey, Lillian Wakefield and Edith Gray in jail in Saginaw, Mich.; Charles Mitchell in jail in Toledo, O.; Ivan Potter in jail in Buffalo, N. Y., and Leo Berger, in jailinCamden, N. J. All of them will be brought before the Federal Grand Jury in Erie, Pa., September 20.

According to the operatives, the arrest of McDermott in a Pittsburg hotel several months ago led to the arrest of the others. He is said to have told the officers of the gang's skillful system of making and passing spurious money. Their most product is said to have been replicas of the $5 bills bearing the Indian head.

The most expert money examiners were fooled by the bills. Fridays and Saturdays seemel to be the popular days of distribution. About $8,000 in counterfeit bills is said to have been passed by them. Stopping at modest price hotels the gang is said to have worked over the entire country.

The Monongahela valley is said to have been worked though not recently. However, within the last few days spurious coins have been found at Bentleyville.

Reppert Friday afternoon. The boys are Alfred Wigg, George Ryan, John Robertson, Roy Furer, Kenneth McBrier, Samuel Haines, Joseph Harrison, Edward Benson and Robert Taylor.

On July 10, Barger testified the boys who had been sent to camp at Indian Head by the First Presbyterian church of Pittsburg, caused one of the company's coal cars to back down a siding, damaging the car. The boys were released on condition that the church pay the damage.

DAY'S WORK BRINGS NO TRACE OF BANDITS

Numerous Clues Followed up With Same Result in All —No Idea as to Where Washington Robbers Are Now to be Found

Officers working on the street car office robbery of early Thursday morning at Washington made no progress whatever Friday toward locating the two bandits that got away with $600 and assaulted Charles Seibert, night cashier. Numerous stories of how the robbers made their getaway and of the belief that they had been seen in certain localities are to be heard but none of these has proven of any real value as yet to the officers.

The most recent story is that the bandits boarded the Baltimore & Ohio freight train about 2 o'clock that morning, which was searched by officers. One man wearing a Panama hat and another who had on a cap are reported to have left the freight at Bertha, a mining settlement near Bruceton. A local trainman said that professional train riders can hide themselves away in a freight and only men who have had experience doing so would be able to locate them.

William Galley of Washington leans to the belief that he hauled a man and the plunder secured in the robbery to Beallsville on Thursday. Mr. Galley's suspicions were not aroused until the man refused to pay him his fare at Beallsville. The young man, who carried a satchel, asked permission to ride as Mr. Galley was driving out East Maiden street. At Beallsville he refused to pay for his ride. When it was demanded the stranger showed fight. He then started off down through the town.

Mr. Galley became suspicious because of the actions of the man and the fact that the satchel seemed to be weighted and bulging as though fiilled with money He tried to find a constable in Beallsville but was unable and had difficulty in getting in communication with officers in Washington. Washington policemen he said did not think the clue worth following but railway company officers went out to investigate late Thursday night

DR. R. W. WOLFE IS SEEKING RENOMINATION

Popular Taylorstown Physician Indicates Desire Again to Hold Office Of Director of the Poor.

Dr. R. W. Wolfe of Taylorstown, believes a public office is a trust demanding the best efforts of the incumbent to carry out the will of the people. His service in the office of director of the poor has indicated that the taxpayers of Washington county desire that the charitable institutions of this county shall be so conducted that no one can justly accuse it of failure to treat those so unfortunate to be public charges in anything but a humane and liberal manner He believes that great good can be effected in handling the affairs of the children committed to the care of the county and has given particular attention to this branch of the work. Dr. Wolfe is the author of a little pamphlet "A Plea for the Child," which will bear careful perusal and which has been widely distributed in the county in an effort to secure good homes for such children as have been deprived of their natural guardians.

The increased business in the management of the poor district demands the services of men who have not only experience but whose personal interest will be given to the care of the county's unfortunates.

Dr. Wolfe comes before the voters of the county for renomination feeling that he has endeavored to carry out their desires in the past and promising the same careful attention if retained in the office. Dr. Wolfe is a native of Washington and has many friends in town who have known him all his life. Since settling in Taylorstown w here he has practiced his profession for 25 years he has always been active in anything for public advancement. He is grateful to all his friends for their support in the past and will be pleased to have their endorsement of his work by their support at the coming primaries in September. 75-t1

AMERICAN MADE GOODS TO FILL SHELVES AT CHRISTMAS SEASON

Dealers Now Getting Stores In Shape for Shipments To Begin Soon

FEW TOYS COME FROM ABROAD

Dolls and Other Toys Being Turned Out in Great Variety in Home Concerns to Supply Eager Market —Matches Hit High Spot in Price

Local dealers are getting their stores in shape for the Chrismas goods which before long will be seen piled high on their shelves. Judging from t he trend of the time the coming Chrismas season will be a good one for shopping and merchants are planning accordingly.

Entirely American made goods will get their first real test this year, without any doubt as to the result. There will be a marked shortage of Christmas toys from abroad, but they will be replaced by a superior article of American made toys. Since the war began the shipment of toys from the great toy manufacturing centers of Germany h as been almost entirely stopped and what will be available will be those already on hand. Doll manufacturing concerns and factories for the manufacture of all sorts of toys are rushed to the limit getting in shape for the holiday season in the New York district, where most of the American toys are now being made. The Kewa Kewa doll is being factureds in Austria and shipment Fine imported china is almost impossible to get. Mostly it is manufactured in Austria and shipments are hard to get through. A boost in the price of china has been noted, and the American made goods though costing more are selling rapidly.

REASONS FOR REJOICING

Republicans in every part of Pennsylvania will rejoice at the auspicious announcement that harmony of the most substantial kind has been established between all factions of their party in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia is, has been and will continue to be the Republican stronghold in Pennsylvania. Advocates of political foils and fancies, political disturbers and discontents have been mysteriously at work in that city for about five years, with the result that the first city in the state has been turned over to the enemies of protection and prosperity and Republican supremacy throughout the entire state had been seriously threatened. Now, however, harmony which promises to be an abiding having been established among the Philadelphia Republicans the party comes into its own in every county of the state. The everlasting advantage of all the people.

Republican leaders in the state are now most concerned in the nomination of competent, stalwart Republicans at the coming primaries. The Republican party, now free to enforce throughout the state and every district in it, the protective and prosperity policies for which it has fought and is fighting needs only the sincere support of Republicans and representative party workers in selecting candidates for the various offices to be filled in order to restore their party to the almost invincible position in which it by right belongs.

Only capable and honest candidates will guarantee an easy and reserved victory for the party at the fall election. Republican success this fall in every district means much to every man, woman and child in the state.

Upon committing the most hideous of crimes a man is almost certain to win a sort of sympathy upon the public's conviction that he is insane. Atonement for his deeed is made by confining him to an insane asylum, which is obviously the only thing to do. But the mere fact that it is an impossibility for even an alienist to positively state whether or not a man is a lunatic has weakened the workings of the law, for the insanity loophole is too often workable.

One of the greatest managers baseball ever had is Fred Clarke, who is quitting his place with the Pittsburg Pirates. He is a credit to the game, being above all fair and square and a talented man of sound judgment and business acumen. The game needs a few more lie him.

It sounds foolish for a few fashion folk to attempt government of a man's habits to the extent of declaring when he should and should not wear a certain kind of hat. Some would even incorporate the dates of the straw hat season in the statutes, the same that some of the more ethical states would attempt to regulate the style of a man's collar by legislation. Their idea of the proper time to leave off wearing straw hats is when the weather is unseasonable and to start again when we feel like it.

NO ANSWER REQUIRED

By HELEN DERBY.

Philip Corning rolled up the architect's blue prints and put them in a drawer of his desk

"Tell Mr Nelson that I will give him my opinion later about the plans," he said to the architect's assistant "I have to consult—another person"

When he was alone Philip took out the plans and gloated over them He and Rosamund had pored over them all winter, and they had agreed that the house would be perfect Nelson, the architect, had almost lost his patience as the young lovers ordered first one change and then another in the plans of the house

And now the worm had turned The temperamental Mr Nelson had declared that it was an utter impossibility to build a flight of stairs in the manner directed by the future Mrs. Corning

Now, Rosamund Delway was temperamental as well as Oscar Nelson; therefore, when Philip broke the news to her over the telephone and hinted that they must sit tight and accept the plans as they were without further changes, Rosamund promptly informed him that she simply must insist upon changing the pantry to the other side of the kitchen because she had decided that the pantry space would be larger and, facing the east end of the house, she could have what she had always desired—a pantry window overrun with morning glories

"It would be so cute to see them every morning," she purred over the wire.

"It will be cute to see Nelson's face when you offer him that argument!" he chuckled.

"I don't intend to see him—you must tell him, Phil!"

"I? Not on your life, darling." And he had followed this inelegant remark with such wise reasoning that Rosamund flew into a pretty temper and told him he could live alone in his old house.

Thereupon she had hung up the receiver and Philip had continued to stare at the space ahead of him with blank incredulity in his eyes until central's acid voice had twice demanded "Number."

That is how it happened that Philip was alone when a messenger boy brought him a small, square, white package sealed with red wax bearing Rosamund's monogram.

"Wait, boy," ordered Philip, breaking the seals, but the lad was halfway down the outer office.

Philip glared at the sight of the engagement ring he had given Rosamund. So the engagement was broken—and she wouldn't listen to reason. She had said, "No answer required."

He locked the ring in his safe and sat down and wrote a note to Oscar Nelson, architect.

"Dear sir," Philip ticked out on the typewriter with one finger, "upon further consideration I have decided to suspend operations upon my new house on Elm highway Please send me an accounting to date and I will forward check by return mail.

"Faithfully yours,
"PHILIP CORNING."

And on the outside of the envelope he wrote a line under the address—"No answer required" At least he would be spared Nelson's hotheaded protests.

Then he rang for a messenger boy.

* * * * * * *

Out on Elm highway, where a charming suburb was forming, a little brown shingled house had its eyes shuttered and its doors padlocked.

People who knew all about the builders wondered what had happened to stop operations, until the news filtered through various sources that the engagement was broken and the little brown house would not be occupied this summer. So the neighbors on Elm highway ceased to watch for the happy lovers, although Mrs. Bruce Wade declared she had seen Philip Corning stalking around the unfinished house in the moonlight.

One rainy day Philip slammed his desk cover and, shrugging on a raincoat, went for a tramp along Elm highway. The steady downpour soothed his restless spirit, and the fresh, damp air was grateful after the close atmosphere of the office.

He turned into the gate and went around to the back door. The sound of his coming was drowned in the falling shower.

Someone was standing on the back porch, peering through the glass panels of the kitchen door—a forlorn little figure in a raincoat, with the hood drawn tightly over its head.

Philip recognized the figure—that raincoat and that head he would have known among a thousand, even had they been concealed under a bushel basket, so keen are the eyes of love

He placed his hands on her shoulders and turned her right about, her face close to his own,—a pale, thin little face it was with wistful blue eyes that brightened and then dimmed with tears at sight of him.

"I was—only—looking," she faltered

"At our house?" asked Philip softly.

She trembled beneath his touch.

"At our house?" he repeated "Our house, made any old way—with the front door in the cellar—morning glories on the chimney tops—the stairs on the roof—are you looking at our house, Rosamund?"

Her lips quivered. She tried to smile and couldn't.

SWISS HOTELS WONDROUS

Stand in Solitary Grandeur, But Lack Nothing That Makes for Comfort of Traveler.

You may climb up the heights by the aid of railways, funiculars, rachs and pilions, diligences and sledges, and when nothing but your own feet will take you any further you will see in Switzerland a grand hotel, magically and incredibly raised aloft in the mountains.

It is solitary—no town, no houses nothing but this hotel hemmed in on all sides by snowy crags and made impregnable by precipices and treacherous snow and ice

At the great redrawing of the map of Europe, when the lesser nationalities are to disappear, the Switzers will take armed refuge in their farthest grand hotels and there defy the mandates of the concert.

For the hotel, no matter how remote it be, lacks nothing that is mentioned in the dictionary of comfort. Beyond its walls your life is not worth twelve hours' purchase.

You would not die of hunger, because you would perish of cold.

At best you might hit on some peasant's cottage in which the standards of existence had not changed for a century.

But once pass within the portals of the grand hotel, and you become the spoiled darling of an intricate organization that laughs at mountains, avalanches and frost.

ONE OF NATURE'S MARVELS

Great Stone Face of the Pyrenees Has Entranced Artists From All Parts of the World.

There is probably no more remarkably example of natural statuary in the world than the famous stone face of the Pyrenees, in Spain. The elevation stands alone, surrounded by valleys so that the profile dominates the skyline for many miles.

The chin is firmly modeled, while the lips seem to be tightly compressed. The line representing the nose is drawn with a strong bold stroke, giving it a truly Castilian character.

The mountain with this singular contour rises so high above the surrounding country that it may be seen for many miles. It is, besides, modeled on such heroic lines that the appearance of foliage, even the growth of forest, does not alter the lifelike appearance throughout the seasons.

The Moral Life.

Moral principle is not thinking the right thing, but doing it. It is giving 16 ounces to the pound and 36 inches to the yard. It is treating your neighbor kindly. It is not worrying others. There are some people who pride themselves on holding to high moral principle, who are an exceeding great annoyance to the people they meet. Of all the unprincipled things in this world, making people unhappy is the meanest. Yet there are many people who are sticklers to moral duty, doing that very thing every day. He is a mean thief who will take from another his peace of mind. One man told us he didn't sleep a whole night because of a needless remark a thoughtless friend made to him. There are many people who are such confirmed materialists that they think you can only do harm to a man by hitting him with a club or stealing his chickens. They don't seem to know there is a mental and spiritual world, where all real feeling dwells and where the deepest torture may be inflicted.—Ohio State Journal.

Billet for Every Bullet.

The proverb "every bullet has its billet," is attributed to William II. One of the earliest references to it is in "Tristram Shandy," where Corporal Trim says, "King William was of an opinion, an' please your honor, that everything was predestined for us in this world; insomuch that he would often say to his soldiers that 'every bullet has its billet.'" The story was known to Wesley, who records in his "Journal," under June 6, 1765, that he traveled with a Lieutenant Cook, who had been in campaigns against Indians, French and Spaniards, and had never been touched. "So true," says Wesley, "is the odd saying of King William that every bullet has its billet."

Odd Combination Kills.

Matthew Grissom, solicitor for a New York life insurance company, was burned to death in a peculiar way. He had set a steel trap for a rat, and the night before a neighbor's dog was shut up in the room by accident. The dog upset a can of gasoline, saturating the atmosphere of the room with gasoline fumes.

About four o'clock Grissom was awakened by the cries of the dog, took a light and went to release him. As he entered the room the fumes of the gasoline became ignited An explosion followed, and Grissom was enveloped in the flames which filled the room, rendering escape impossible.

Art and Appetite.

"Your singing tonight was divine!" exclaimed an enthusiastic admirer to the prima donna. "I could see by the expression on your face and the light in your eyes that you were inspired"

"I fear you are mistaken," said the prima donna, with her most engaging smile. "Our art is so exacting that we don't care to eat a hearty meal before singing. I was ravenously hungry and I was thinking of all the good things I would order when the concert was ended."

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Advice of This Charleroi Woman Is of Certain Value.

Many a woman's back has many aches and pains.

Oftimes 'tis the kidneys' fault.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

Many Charleroi women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. Reed Jackson, 207 Prospect avenue, Charleroi, says: "About five years ago, I was troubled by a constant backache. If I did a little extra work, the pain in my back was intense. I didn't rest well at night and got up in the morning lame and stiff. If I stooped, sharp pains caught me and I could hardly straighten up. I also had rheumatic pains in my back and arms. I couldn't do my sweeping. Dizzy spells and hot flashes bothered me terribly. As Doan's Kidney Pills had been used in the family, I got a box at Piper Bros.' Drug Store and began taking them. One box practically cured me."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Jackson had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.
